Time to party as city hosts USWNT ticker-tape parade

The World Cup winners are rolling through NYC.

Wednesday's USWNT ticker-tape parade in New York City will be huge.

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced Sunday that the city will host a ticker-tape parade in honor of the United States women's national team's 2-0 victory over the Netherlands to win the team's fourth World Cup title.

"On and off the field, this team represents what's best about New York City and our nation. The confidence, grit and perseverance of the U.S. women's national soccer team serve as an inspiration to all who watch them," de Blasio said in a press release.

The parade will be held in Lower Manhattan's Canyon of Heroes. A similar parade was held for the 2015 Team USA squad that defeated Japan.

In preparation for the festivities, we've put together a parade guide, including start time, route, street closures — even how to watch the parade online if you're stuck in the office or can't be in Manhattan to experience all the excitement in person.

Parade start time
The USWNT ticker-tape parade will start at 9:30 a.m. A special ceremony (tickets are required) will be held at City Hall at 10:30 p.m.

Parade route
The parade will travel along Broadway from The Battery to City Hall.

Getting there by subway
There are several MTA subway stations near the parade route. If you're heading to the ticker-tape parade, you can take the 4 or 5 train to Wall Street, Bowling Green and Fulton Street. Alternatively, you can also take the 2 or 3 trains to Park Place, Wall Street, Fulton Street and Chambers Street, or the N, R or W trains to City Hall.

Due to the number of people trying to get to the parade, the MTA may announce service changes in the area; certain trains may skip stops; and certain station entrances and exits may be closed near the parade. Visit mta.info for up-to-date information about MTA service changes for the USWNT ticker-tape parade in New York City.

Street closures
An official list of street closures for the USWNT had not been released as of press time. Motorists, however, should avoid areas in Lower Manhattan south of Canal Street from the Hudson River to the East River throughout the day.

According to the NYPD, streets on Broadway and surrounding areas of the parade will begin closing at about 6 a.m. Wednesday. NYPD will enforce "no parking" rules from 12 a.m. in areas near the parade route.

Additionally, the Manhattan-bound side and the Park Row entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge will be closed for the duration of the parade.

Parade livestreaming
If you're stuck at work and can't make it to the parade, you can watch a livestream of the event on several local networks including abc7ny.com, fox5ny.com, newyork.cbslocal.com, nbcnewyork.com and the Mayor's Office's YouTube channel. EarthCam will be live-webcasting the parade as well.

Weather
According to weather.com, Wednesday's weather will be partly cloudy with a high of 90 degrees with a 10 percent chance of rain.

2 Equal pay bill for US national teams introduced

Sen. Joe Manchin (D-W.Va.) introduced a bill Tuesday preventing the federal government from providing funding for the 2026 FIFA World Cup until the United States Soccer Federation agrees to equal pay for its men's and women's national teams. "No federal funds may be appropriated or otherwise made available to provide support for the 2026 World Cup, including support for a host city, a participating State or local agency, the United States Soccer Federation, the Confederation of North, Central America and Caribbean Association Football (CONCACAF), or the Federation de Football Association (FIFA), until the date on which the United States Soccer Federation agrees to provide equitable pay," the bill reads. In March, 28 members of the U.S. women's national team filed lawsuit against the U.S. Soccer Federation accusing U.S. Soccer of gender discrimination. REUTERS

3 Ex-combat pilot challenges McConnell for Senate

Amy McGrath, a former U.S. Marine combat pilot whose compelling biography drew national attention during an unsuccessful Democratic congressional campaign last year, said on Tuesday she would challenge Republican Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell in 2020. In a video announcing her campaign for the U.S. Senate from Kentucky, McGrath, 44, described writing a letter at age 13 to her senator, telling McConnell she wanted to become a fighter pilot even though women were barred from combat at the time — a story she also highlighted when running for the U.S. House of Representatives last year. "I've often wondered how many other people did Mitch McConnell never take the time to write back, or even think about," she said, before accusing McConnell of turning his back on his constituents. 4 Rapper Minaj pulls out of Saudi Arabia concert

Rapper Nicki Minaj said on Tuesday that she was pulling out of a planned concert in Saudi Arabia next week, citing her support for the rights of women and the LGBTQ community. Minaj, known for her raunchy outfits and provocative stage performances, was due to headline the Jeddah World Fest music festival on July 18, but her plan to appear was criticized last week on social media. "While I want nothing more than to bring my show to fans in Saudi Arabia, after better educating myself on the issues, I believe it is important for me to make clear my support for the rights of women, the LGBTQ community and freedom of expression," Minaj said in a statement. The New York-based Human Rights Foundation (HRF) last week urged Minaj to cancel her performance, saying her appearance would be at odds with the rapper's participation in LGBTQ festivities. REUTERS

Appeals court finds Trump's blocking of Twitter critics unconstitutional

Seven blocked Twitter users and a Columbia University group were part of the challenge.

President Donald Trump violated the Constitution by blocking people whose views he disliked from his Twitter account, a federal appeals court ruled on Tuesday.

In a 3-0 decision, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Manhattan said the First Amendment forbids Trump from using Twitter's "blocking" function to limit access to his account, which has 61.8 million followers.

"The First Amendment does not permit a public official who utilizes a social media account for all manner of official purposes to exclude persons from an otherwise-open online dialogue because they expressed views with which the official disagrees," wrote Circuit Judge Barrington Parker, citing several Supreme Court decisions.

A White House spokesman had no immediate comment. White House social media director Dan Scavino was also a defendant.

"We are disappointed with the court's decision and are exploring possible next steps," said Kelly Laco, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Justice.

Twitter had no immediate comment.

Trump has made his @RealDonaldTrump account, which he opened in 2009, a central and controversial part of his presidency, using it to promote his agenda and to attack critics.

His blocking of critics was challenged by the Knight First Amendment Institute at Columbia University, as well as seven Twitter users he had blocked.

"The decision will help ensure the integrity and vitality of digital spaces that are increasingly important to our democracy," said Jameel Jaffer, Knight's executive director.

Tuesday's decision upheld a May 2018 ruling by U.S. District Judge Naomi Reice Buchwald in Manhattan, which prompted Trump to unblock some accounts.

The Justice Department had called her ruling "fundamentally misconceived," saying Trump used Twitter to express his views, not to offer a public forum for discussion.

Parker, however, said Trump's account bears "all the trappings of an official, state-run account" and is "one of the White House's main vehicles for conducting official business."

He said Trump and his aides have characterized the president's tweets as official statements, and that even the National Archives considers them official records.

Parker also found it ironic that Trump censored speech at a time the conduct of the U.S. government and its officials is subject to intense, passionate and wide-open debate.

"This debate, as uncomfortable and as unpleasant as it frequently may be, is nonetheless a good thing," he wrote. "We remind the litigants and the public that if the First Amendment means anything, it means that the best response to disfavored speech on matters of public concern is more speech, not less." Cuomo announces new LIRR station as part of Belmont Park redevelopment

The plans are part of the new home for the NHL's Islanders.

letters@metro.us

Gov. Andrew Cuomo has announced plans for a new Long Island Rail Road station to be built as part of the Belmont Park Redevelopment Project, which will provide a home base for the National Hockey League's New York Islanders.

The station will serve the proposed 19,000-seat arena, a 250-room hotel, and a 435,000-square-foot retail complex at the state-owned horse racing venue, as well as local commuters who have long needed more transportation options.

> "The Belmont project will help drive the region's economy forward while building the Islanders a state-of-the-art facility at home on Long Island."
> Gov. Andrew Cuomo

Located between the Queens Village and Bellerose stations on the LIRR's Main Line, the station will be the first full-time LIRR station built in 50 years. It's expected to be partially open by 2021 — as the Islanders arena opens to the public — and fully operational by 2023.

"The Belmont project will help drive the region's economy forward while building the Islanders a state-of-the-art facility at home on Long Island, creating thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars in economic output along the way," Cuomo said. "We will provide millions of visitors and fans a fast and affordable way to get there and continue New York's nation-leading investments in 21st-century transportation infrastructure."

The new station will provide direct service to Belmont Park from both the east and west, as opposed to the LIRR spur, which currently only provides westbound service. In addition to providing service to the new entertainment complex, the station will provide a much-needed commuting option for area residents.

The station is expected to receive service every half-hour during peak times and hourly during off-peak periods. The parking lot north of the Belmont race track, which has 2,860 spaces, will be shared by commuters and arena patrons.

The deal involves a partnership with New York Arena Partners, the private development group behind the Belmont Park project. Constructing the new full-time station on the LIRR's Main Line and upgrading the existing spur is estimated to cost $105 million, of which $30 million is to be funded by the developers initially and $75 million is to be funded by the state.

The developers are expected to contribute an additional $67 million over time to offset the state's costs, according to reports. The developers will also receive economic incentives, including a 20-year abatement period for the hotel and a 15-year abatement for the retail complex.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Billionaire Ross Perot, who shook up 1990s presidential politics, dies

Perot led a Gallup poll five months before the 1992 election.

REUTERS

H. Ross Perot, the feisty Texas technology billionaire who rattled U.S. politics with two independent presidential campaigns in the 1990s that struck a chord with disgruntled voters, died on Tuesday at the age of 89, his family said.

"Ross Perot, the groundbreaking businessman and loving husband, brother, father and grandfather, passed away early Tuesday at his home in Dallas, surrounded by his devoted family," the Perot family said in a statement. A family spokesman said leukemia was the cause of death.

Perot's fortune was estimated at $4.1 billion by Forbes magazine in April 2019.

Perot was a natural salesman who made a fortune in computer services but he was an unlikely and unconventional politician. He was short with buzz-top haircut, spoke with a folksy Texas drawl and had protruding ears that even he joked about. He was blunt and assertive and his success in business made him accustomed to getting his way.

Perot was so gung-ho that when two of his employees were jailed in Iran in 1978, he organized a team of commandos from his employees and hired a former Green Beret colonel to break them out.

Perot leaped into the 1992 presidential race as an independent and quickly found a lode of Americans turned off by the Republican and Democratic parties. His overarching issue was curbing the government's deficit spending — an issue he referred to as the "crazy aunt in the basement" who no one wanted to talk about.

His outsider campaign, much of it financed by his own money, featured 30-minute television "infomercials." With his charts, self-deprecating humor and down-home economic remedies, Perot led a Gallup poll five months before the election with 39 percent, compared to 31 percent for incumbent Republican George H.W. Bush and 25 percent for Democrat Bill Clinton.

SURPRISE WITHDRAWAL

A month later, however, Perot stunned the political world by withdrawing from the race. He re-entered several weeks later, saying he had dropped out because Republican tricksters had been plotting to disrupt his daughter's wedding.

Perot finished with a respectable 19 percent of the vote in the presidential election, trailing Clinton's 43 percent and Bush's 37.5 percent.

Perot stayed active in politics by speaking out against the North American Free Trade Agreement, saying it would create a "giant sucking sound" of American jobs going to Mexico. REUTERS

Aries Look at every situation open-mindedly. How you come to a decision and carry out your plans should also include how others will be influenced by your actions.

Taurus Test your thoughts and ideas on others. Sharing with a close friend or relative will help you decide what's doable and what isn't. Constructive criticism should be valued, not shunned.

Gemini Past experiences will help you recognize what's right for you and what isn't. Make changes based on facts and on what you need, not on what someone tells you.

Cancer Help others and you will find joy in giving. The connections you make will encourage you to socialize more. Love and romance are on the rise, and new beginnings look promising.

Leo Don't let your ego get in the way. Emotional matters will surface if you are too quick to judge and act in haste. Concentrate on personal growth, not on changing others.

Virgo Spend time updating your qualifications, appearance and important relationships. Attend functions and network with your peers. If you show interest in others, you'll gain respect.

Libra Take in information before you get into a discussion with someone who thinks differently than you. Get your facts straight and have your thoughts in place. Preparation will make a difference.

Scorpio Let your actions be your voice. It's what you do and how you treat someone that will make a difference. Don't force change on others when you can coax them with incentives, kindness and love.

Sagittarius Don't be tempted by a false impression that someone's peddling. If you consider the logistics of what's being said, you'll realize the risks involved. Use your intelligence to combat fabrication.

Capricorn Focus on your target. Dismiss emotions that could stand in your way. Show confidence and make the changes you deem necessary. Celebrate your victory with a loved one.

Aquarius Stick to the basics and don't make a hasty decision. Give yourself enough time to adjust to what's going on and to react without letting your emotions get in the way.

Pisces Sign up, get started and do whatever it takes to bring about the changes necessary to fulfill your dream. Much can be accomplished if you dig in and make things happen. EUGENIA LAST

Yeasayer are unleashed and more focused than ever

Anand Wilder, of the beloved indie-rock band, talks new album "Erotic Reruns."

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

"Well, it's really just [that] the record industry was not really working out for us anymore." That could be an understatement from any musician trying to make a living these days.

But coming from Anand Wilder, one of the principal songwriters of the beloved indie-rock band Yeasayer, that sentiment could have a little more unpacking to it than a clear-cut artist-against-bean-counters scenario.

Formed in 2006, the band — consisting of Wilder on guitar and vocals, singer and multi-instrumentalist Chris Keating, and Ira Wolf Tuton on bass — have stretched the boundary lines of pop music to hallucinatory levels, never staying in one place long enough to be defined by limiting genres. This year, the band broke from working with high-profile alternative labels Secretly Canadian and Mute to release their new album, "Erotic Reruns," on their own Yeasayer Records. While they lost support from labels, having their independence allowed them to dictate their album cycle as the band released four singles from the nine-track album ahead of the album's release.

"There wasn't enough kind of financial support," says Wilder of the move toward more DIY approach, adding, "You have to sacrifice a lot of your copyright and intellectual property when you work with the record labels. So we figured, let's just do it ourselves. And then, if we have hits, or if we actually sell records, we'll reap more of the actual profits instead of just giving them to some record label that's not even putting in that much money to help us create anything."

The resulting album is the most streamlined and direct representation of what the band has been trying to achieve over the past decade-plus. Songs veer into unexpected directions, such as the Wilder-penned "Let Me Listen in on You" which starts as a lush Beatles-influenced synth-pop ballad and breaks down only to erupt with a tense industrial bridge. These too-crazy-to-work moments happen all over the album, with both Wilder and Keating delivering transfixing hooks over the bands melting-pot party rhythms.

The album is also the band's most outwardly political release to date. Songs like "24-Hour Hateful Live!" attack the Trump administration and horrid state of the world head-on with lyrics like "ICE to ISIS, migrant crisis / Gleeful cruelty at the top." For Wilder, discussing the elephant in the room wasn't necessarily that difficult. But, making sure their lyrics would stand the test of time would be the true balancing act.

"I think, with this album, we were like, well, we have to address it, because it's just such a horrible, horrible time," he says. "Then, once you delve into it, then you need to figure out how you're going to address the politics. And I think we tried to do some kind of more obscure, abstract lyrics and then some very, very direct ones."

While setting out on their own has helped to give Yeasayer a new sense of purpose and freedom, Wilder explains that the three-headed beast still needs to occasionally fight for larger shares of the meal when it comes to getting ideas on tape.

"There's a lot of ideas that are bad ideas, and you have to duke it out, and you have to make compromises, and you have to hope that the group decision is superior to the solo decision," explains Wilder. "And then, if you really feel strongly about something, then you have to fight to make it work on the album.

Make sure to catch Yeasayer this Saturday, July 13, at Webster Hall.

Why do more and more people practice Kabbalah?

Recognized spiritual leader Batsheva Zimerman explained to Metro why this esoteric method, discipline, and school of thought of Judaism has become the spiritual choice for many.

MONICA GARZÓN

Becoming an authority in Kabbalah requires an arduous and extensive study. However, it is much more difficult to be selected as one of the students with the privilege of belonging to the ancient spiritual lineage of the Kabbalists.

Batsheva Zimerman is one of these few people personally chosen by the former dean of the worldwide Kabbalah Centre organisation rabbi Philip Berg to become a living link in this great chain of ancient knowledge. Over the course of 17 years she has been teaching this wisdom to thousands of students in South America and the Middle East. Batsheva is the founder of the Kabbalah Centres in Mexico, Chile, Argentina and Israel. She also directs such centres in Venezuela, Colombia and Mexico. Her effort, commitment and dedication, together with the love and fidelity she generates among the students, have defined Zimerman. Metro talked with Batsheva to learn more.

What is Kabbalah?
Kabbalah is an ancient spiritual wisdom that teaches the individual and the world how we can improve our lives. It explains how the universe works. And by understanding it, we can begin to take more control of our lives to transform them into something better.

Is it a religion?
It precedes religions for a long time. That is why it is considered a spiritual wisdom, not a religion. Any person, regardless of beliefs, can take advantage of this knowledge. It is a universal wisdom, therefore it does not discriminate.

Why are more and more people practicing Kabbalah?
We are in a time when people are looking for deeper answers about existence, about life. Religion, whatever it may be, has fallen short in that regard. Kabbalah looks into the root of every issue, to understand the "why?" of everything. And more and more people are thirsty to understand what life is about.

Why do many people seek spirituality?

| ISTOCK

Because we keep looking to fill those deep voids we have and we understand that nothing external will allow us to feel full or to find that permanent happiness. With spirituality, and especially with the tools that the Kabbalah Center provides, we can understand how to do it ourselves, and begin to work toward that fulfilment.

Why is it difficult to believe in something that sustains people and give coherence to daily life?
There could be several reasons. ... Some of us are afraid to ask those questions or get into those complex and intangible aspects. Others are disenchanted with so much incoherent information that humanity received for centuries. Others simply do not care to understand that aspect of life and assume the responsibility.

Many people also seek happiness in self-help books.
They need answers. However, not all books provide the necessary tools for each one to begin their transformation process. Many of them explain us the what and the how, but not the why, and this is where the wisdom of the Kabbalah comes in.

There are so many people detached from religion and there is so much sectarianism.
Faith is a subject that is related to religion. It is believing without questioning that generates apathy. That is why more and more people are looking for the Kabbalah Center. After understanding how the universe works and our role in it, faith becomes certain and conscious.

Breaking boards and blurring lines

Riley Stearns talks his second feature-length film, "The Art of Self-Defense."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Screenwriter and director Riley Stearns is dedicated to the art of storytelling. In his latest feature, "The Art of Self-Defense," Stearns tells a story that punches you with curiosity while showcasing an exciting variety of twists and turns.

The film follows a down-on-his-luck and frail accountant, Casey (Jesse Eisenberg), who suffers a brutal attack that leads him to join a karate class in a strip mall. Just like the karate students in the film break boards, Stearns wanted to break many molds with this feature — whether it be the limits of moral ambiguity, the structure of pseudo-masculinity or the lines between reality and a timeless parallel overall.

What was your initial inspiration for the film?
I actually do practice martial arts, but jiu-jitsu. I've been doing that for six years now. When I wrote the film, it was at the tail end of 2015 and I had been training for about two years. But I was toying with an idea that just wasn't really working for me. I felt like I was just trying too hard to do something that wasn't really a story yet. I decided to make a film that was set in the world of karate, but also one that explores very real thoughts and fears that I was having at that time, especially about who I was as a person and society's expectations of me as a man. [I wanted to] kind of really poke fun at all of that through this pseudo-sports movie that I think people think is gonna be one thing and go a very structured standard direction, but then really just take it down a darker and more unexpected path.

Imogen Poots stars as Anna and Steve Terada as Thomas. PROVIDED

Since the film does explore that hypermasculine notion that comes with sports, what are you hoping audiences will take away from that point?
I didn't really want to make a "message" film or have anyone think I was trying to teach them a lesson. But at the same time, I think that when I started talking about things that are important to me, I began realizing that they were important to other people as well. So hopefully it's opening up conversations. It's not necessarily giving any answers, and I don't think at the end of the movie it solved anything, to say the least. But, at the same time, it was very important to talk about it in a very overt and literal way and have there be no question as to what side of the argument I land on.

While watching the film, you realize that it takes place not exactly in our world. Was that an imperative aspect to tell this story?
Yes. For me, if you don't have to have something in the movie that's going to be a negative aspect to the film, then just don't have it. The biggest example in this instance is the fact that cellphones don't exist in this world. It's never something that I think an audience misses; if you never talk about it, then you never have to explain why you don't have cellphone reception or why the battery in the phone has gone out. That's a good thing to me. You want them to live in a world that you've created.

I also personally enjoyed the irony of the ending and how everything came full circle. What was your thought process for the ending of the film?
I'm a big fan of setups and payoffs. That was an instance of just a funny setup and payoff. Also, a character making a morally abhorrent decision, but for the good of everything else — that was interesting to me. Even though the film, at least I think, ends positively and wraps up in a way that is hopefully cathartic for audiences, at the same time it's not a black-and-white, good or bad situation. I do think there is some moral ambiguity going on. I think if you can have something along those lines, it's always more interesting than just being like, yeah, the good guys win and the bad guys lose.

"The Art of Self-Defense" hits theaters this Friday, July 12.

METS CHEAP NEW TICKET PLAN THEIR WHITE FLAG FOR 2019

PANTORNO'S PERCH

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno

Pete Alonso provided a bright spot for Mets fans this season with an emphatic win at the 2019 Home Run Derby on Monday night. GETTY IMAGES

Even if general manager Brodie Van Wagenen doesn't want to admit it, the Mets season is over.

With 72 games remaining, chances at a division title look lost already. The Atlanta Braves are hitting their stride while the Mets are sitting in fourth place sitting 13.5 games back.

Remember when Van Wagenen claimed the Mets were the class of the division before the start of the season?

You can't help but think about that Family Guy quote: "Opening Day and here's the first pitch... and the season's over."

Okay, the drop wasn't that severe. The Mets waited until their seemingly-usual June swoon to fall out of contention this year.

However, Van Wagenen has yet to label the team as sellers just yet during his disastrous first season. Second-year manager Mickey Callaway added to the tone-deaf sentiment, claiming his team is "not out of anything yet."

A series loss to the last-place Marlins when they get back from the All-Star break, however, should change that thinking.

It looks like the owning Wilpon family and the marketing department aren't as optimistic.

Shortly following Pete Alonso's victory at the Home Run Derby on Monday night — providing Mets fans with some semblance of joy this season — the organization posted an advertisement on Twitter account introducing a promotion to save 80 percent off tickets to all remaining home games starting Jul. 23.

They're veiling it as the "Pete Alonso Home Run Derby Special."

I'll call it "The Wilpons Need To Put Butts In The Seats Because They Refuse To Spend Money On A Winner Special."

Mets fans are starting to get the hint and not blindly throwing their money to line the Wilpons' pockets. Their total attendance this year of 1.2 million fans ranks 15th in the majors and is by far the worst of any major-market team playing in New York, Los Angeles, Boston, and St. Louis.

Now, fans can go see a Saturday night game against the Pittsburgh Pirates for just $7.60 a ticket.

This isn't the organization being philanthropic and making tickets available and affordable for all their fans. This is the team telling its supporters that the season is over and meaningful baseball at Citi Field will be at a premium for the remainder of 2019.

If the Mets thought they could get back in it, a promotion such as this would be scoffed at. Instead, they'll just continue to be the laughing stock of Major League Baseball.

Yankees, Sox in on Zack Wheeler trade talks

Zack Wheeler is garnering plenty of interest on the trade market. GETTY IMAGES

The first domino to prompt the New York Mets' selling season could very well fall soon.

According to multiple reports this week, the Mets have discussed trading starting pitcher Zack Wheeler with the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox.

The 29-year-old right-hander has regressed in 2019, posting a 6-6 record and 4.69 ERA in 19 starts. It's a significant drop-off from the sterling second half he had last year in which he went 10-1 with a 2.06 ERA in his final 15 outings.

That plus stuff last year is what makes him one of the top pitching targets on the market as Major League Baseball's trade deadline approaches at the end of the month.

Wheeler is a free agent at season's end and is a prime trade candidate for a Mets team that should be in full sell mode.

However, the organization said it would use their opening series of the second half against the Miami Marlins as one final gauge of whether they should dismantle the team. The Mets are 40-50 through their first 90 games and 13.5 games back of the Atlanta Braves for first place in the NL East.

Given Wheeler's impending free agency, the price isn't expected to be all that high. However, the Mets could continue to build up their talent pool in a middle-of-the-road farm system.

Both the Yankees and Red Sox require starting pitching help for the second half of the season.

The Mets' crosstown rivals recently got Domingo German back from injury but could use an established talent like Wheeler to provide another option for the shaky bottom half of the rotation.

JA Happ continues to struggle in 2019 as his ERA is at a bloated 5.02 while James Paxton and CC Sabathia carry marks over 4.00.

They have reportedly explored possible deals for the likes of Cleveland's Trevor Bauer, Giants ace Madison Bumgarner, and Toronto's Marcus Stroman.

Boston is in dire need of a consistent fifth arm to round out its rotation.

Behind Chris Sale, David Price, Rick Porcello, and Eduardo Rodriguez, the Red Sox have had six-different pitchers make starts due to Nathan Eovaldi's right elbow surgery.

The Red Sox could be seen as a more plausible trade candidate considering Mets VP/assistant GM for scouting and player development, Allard Baird, and VP of player personnel, Jared Banner, worked with Boston in the past and know their farm system.

The problem is, Boston's farm system is considered to be one of the worst in baseball. The Sox don't have a single prospect ranked within MLB Pipeline's top-90.

The Yankees have two in the top-100.

Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov suddenly has a dangerous team on his hands. GETTY IMAGES

Prokhorov, Nets staying modest in NY takeover

Brooklyn's owner continues to outclass James Dolan.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Brooklyn Nets are taking over the New York basketball landscape over the Knicks.

That's what happens though when you have the kind of offseason general manager Sean Marks is having.

In the span of a week, the Nets have gone from a nice little team in the East to a budding powerhouse after signing Kevin Durant and Kyrie Irving.

Marks followed it up by adding verified depth in DeAndre Jordan, Garrett Temple, and Wilson Chandler to the mix.

Even with Durant expected to miss the entire 2019-20 season after rupturing his Achilles during the NBA Finals with the Warriors, the Nets are still poised to make the postseason for a second-straight year.

It's an unthinkable feat that could happen this decade considering where the team was just a few years ago.

Gutted from the Paul Pierce, Kevin Garnett, and Jason Terry trade in 2013, the Nets averaged 23 wins per season from 2015-2018.

Their struggles let the Knicks off the hook for being just as dysfunctional under the often-controversial owner in James Dolan.

Marks, however, found a way to take the Nets from nothing and make Brooklyn an attractive target for the likes of Durant and Irving.

From bargain signings to the trade for D'Angelo Russell, who developed into an All-Star under head coach Kenny Atkinson, the Barclays Center went from a house of horrors to the new mecca of Big Apple basketball, at least according to the Daily News.

All the while, Dolan and the Knicks continued to think they could skate by merely on their reputation.

But the Phil Jackson tenure was an embarrassment, the Kristaps Porzingis era was short-lived, the Carmelo Anthony split was a mess. Instead of building a legitimate foundation through homegrown talent, the organization continued to invest their future on the prospect of signing big names in free agency.

From LeBron James to Durant, to Irving, that's yet to happen.

And it resulted in the Nets taking over New York just seven years after moving to Brooklyn from New Jersey.

It will be one of the biggest follies of the Dolan era as his franchise is now poised to assume the role of little brother in a city they've called home since 1947.

Even during their huge offseason that has turned around the fortunes of the franchise, Nets owner Mikhail Prokhorov isn't planning any parades just yet.

"As part of the new culture Sean and Kenny have been building, we are looking at every step as the next one in a long journey," he said in a statement. "We're not shouting, we're climbing. So, on the occasion of the signing of Kevin, Kyrie, DeAndre, Garrett, and Wilson, we're not going to shout out loud from the rooftops, just give a little 'woo!' with our inside voice. A happy day for the Brooklyn Nets. Hoping for many more to come."

And the Knicks aren't even a blip on his radar.

"We don't set the takeover of New York as our goal," Prokhorov said (h/t New York Post). We're about steadily developing a team that, at some point in the not-too-distant future, will get us a championship."
